PART II: You may not return to questions 1-5. Answer only questions 6-30.
You have 20 minutes to complete this portion of the test.

Questions 6 to 9 refer to the paragraph:

“Only two United States Presidents have ever been arrested while in office. On a night in 1853 President Franklin Pierce was returning on horseback from the home of William Morgan in the southeastern part of Washington, D.C. In the pitch-black darkness, the President accidentally ran down Mrs. Nathan Lewis, who was crossing the street. A policeman, Stanley Edelin, arrested the chief executive for reckless horsemanship. According to police records, the President simply said, “I am Mr. Pierce,” and he was released. The woman suffered little more than minor cuts and bruises.

Twice in 1866, Ulysses Grant, while still Commander of the Army of the Potomac was arrested for speeding. In each case he was fined five dollars in precinct court. While he was President, Grant was racing his buggy west on Madison Street between 11th and 12th Avenues in Washington. Constable William West stepped out into the road and grabbed the horse’s bridle. The horse dragged him 50 feet before it stopped. Officer West, a Union veteran, recognized Grant and began to apologize. But the President said, “Officer do your duty.” The horse and buggy were taken to police headquarters and briefly impounded – but no charges were pressed because of the confusion over whether or not a President can be arrested without first being impeached by Congress.”

6. When President Pierce was arrested for reckless horsemanship, he identified himself and was released. With this information, you can conclude?
  - a. President Pierce didn’t really run over the woman
  - b. the woman wasn’t hurt badly enough for the police to jail Pierce
  - c. Pierce was released because of his presidential position
  - d. none of the above
7. Which of the conclusions below is most appropriate based on U.S. Grant’s arrest?
  - a. apparently, Grant enjoyed driving his carriage at a high rate of speed
  - b. Grant use his prestigious office to get out of matters like these
  - c. Grant believed the President should be permitted to drive as he wished
  - d. none of the above
8. The first paragraph of the story most likely leads you to conclude that
  - a. Pierce intended to collide with the woman on the street
  - b. Pierce did protest when he was released because of his name
  - c. Pierce’s position as President of the U.S. provided him with a certain status
  - d. none of the above

9. The last paragraph of the story leads to a conclusion about the relationship between a President and the law. Which of the following best describes that relationship?
- a. at that time a President was clearly under the same law as any other citizen
  - b. at that time the relationship between the President and the law was not clearly defined
  - c. at that time a President was immune from prosecution
  - d. none of the above

Questions 10 to 12 refer to the paragraph:

“Ancient Shaolin Monastery at the foot of Song Mountain in China seems like just another of the many monasteries founded to teach the Buddhist religion. But Shaolin is special. For here, in an earlier time Shaolin’s soldier-monks invented the martial art of kung fu. Shaolin Monastery did not begin as a center for warlike activities. It was a place for meditation any prayer. According to tradition, an Indian monk named Bodhidharma settled in the area in about 525 A.D. His mission was to teach the form of Buddhism called Zen. From the discipline of Zen meditation sprang a deadly form of combat. This combat is a fast and acrobatic style of self-defense made in the United States by Bruce Lee in the movies and in the television series “Kung Fu.” When it was in its heyday, Shaolin Monastery had 2,000 soldier-monks who wielded long sticks and bare fists to defend themselves against bandits and Japanese pirates.

When the Communists came to power in China in the 1940’s, they tried to suppress Buddhism. The monastery was damaged in three fires during the 1960’s and 1970’s. It was then closed by the government. Shi Dauchan, the last true Shaolin master was jailed. Shaolin is once again revered by the Chinese.”
